COMBAT SPORTS ACT 2013

The following rule is made under section 107 of the Combat Sports Act 2013.

Timekeeper’s role and responsibilities at professional contests

The timekeeper is responsible for providing their own time pieces for contests.

Sounding the bell at the end of each round.

Once a round has commenced, the timekeeper must stop the watch when:

- a contest has been stopped by the referee
- the referee calls “stop” (and restart when the referee calls “box/fight”).

The internal or rest period between rounds is 1 minute for all disciplines except Muay Thai where a two minute break may be approved by the CSA upon written application

END OF REST PERIOD: Buzzer/whistle to sound approximately 10 seconds before the end of the rest period. Before sounding the buzzer/whistle, the timekeeper must advise the announcer to call “Seconds Down” and announce the number of the ensuing round.

Knockdown (excluding MMA): When a combatant is knocked down, the timekeeper should immediately start the “knockdown” watch and in a loud clear voice, call the elapsed seconds until the referee has taken up the count. After a combatant is knocked down and the count is commenced but regains his feet, the count must continue to eight.

The circumstances when a timekeeper would stop the call on a “down combatant”:

- When the referee deems the “down” combatant was not knocked down
- When the referee deems a contest over as a result of a knockdown.

Sounding the bell (excluding MMA): At a professional contest, if a referee has commenced counting over a combatant (whether “down” or on his feet) and the round is due to end, a timekeeper must not sound the bell until the combatant is counted out and the referee gives the order to “box/fight”.

If a referee is cautioning a combatant or has stopped the contest for any reason and the bell is due to sound to signify the end of the bout, the timekeeper shall not sound the bell at the end of the round until the referee has given the order to “box/fight”.

End of a contest: When a contest is ceased by a referee in favour of a combatant, the timekeeper must immediately stop the (elapsed time) watch and tell the Recorder and announcer the stoppage time and the round of the stoppage.

No Foul Rule: If the referee sends one combatant to a neutral corner and the other to their own corner after the “No Foul” Rule has been invoked, the timekeeper should stop the watch.

Combatant knocked out of the ring: If a combatant is knocked out of the ring and on to the apron or floor, the timekeeper should not stop the watch. They must commence a call of 20 seconds for a combatant on the floor or 10 seconds for a combatant on the apron.
