Health Privacy Code of Practice

1 Overview

- 1.1 This Health Code is made under Part 5 of the Health Records and Information Privacy Act 2002 (“the HRIP Act”). It modifies the application to the Public Service Commission (“the PSC”) of certain health privacy principles.
- 1.2 The PSC is a NSW government sector agency as scheduled in the Government Sector Employment Act 2013 (“the GSE Act”) that exists to support the Public Service Commissioner in the execution of his or her functions. The PSC has the lead role in designing and implementing workforce management strategies and reform to ensure the capability of the NSW government sector workforce to deliver high quality public services to the people of NSW. The PSC’s functions are set out in the GSE Act and include, for example, identifying reform opportunities for the government sector workforce, advising the Government on policy innovations and strategy, leading workforce planning, reporting on workforce diversity and reporting annually on the state of the government sector. In performing these functions, the PSC collects and analyses data which includes health information.
- 1.3 A corresponding privacy code applies to the PSC in respect of the Privacy and Personal Information Protection Act 1998.

2 Other exemptions not affected

“State owned corporation” means a State owned corporation within the meaning of the State Owned Corporations Act 1989.

4 Information covered by the Code

- 4.1 In performing its functions the PSC deals with information about the NSW public sector workforce and prospective NSW public sector employees. This information is known as the PSC workforce data.
- 4.2 The types of information that the PSC deals with are set out in data specifications for each of the PSC’s data collections. The types of information that the PSC collect as part of its data collections are in the following broad categories: employment, demographics, recruitment, and attitudinal (or opinion).

Health Privacy Code of Practice

- 4.3 Some of the information that the PSC collects as part of its data collections constitutes “health information” for the purposes of the HRIP Act. For example, where the PSC collects statistical information as to sick leave usage or disability status, this may constitute “health information”. Any such information is collected, used and disclosed by the PSC only where directly relevant to the performance of the PSC’s functions under the GSE Act or to undertake activities ancillary to those functions. Data which constitutes health information when it is collected is not disclosed other than in an aggregated form.
- 4.4 This Code applies to all PSC workforce data held by the PSC.

- 5.3 To the extent that the collection of health information about contingent labour and external to NSW government sector agency employees, and prospective NSW public sector employees, other than prospective NSW government sector employees, may not be directly related to a function or activity of the PSC, the PSC is permitted to depart from this principle.
- 5.4 Collection of health information about contingent labour, external to NSW government sector agency employees and prospective NSW public sector employees, other than prospective NSW government sector employees will not be broader in type or scope than the PSC’s collection of health information about NSW government sector employees, prospective NSW government sector employees and employees of State owned corporations and relates to the same types of information.

- 5.7 There is no intention to depart from this principle.

HPP 5 – Retention and security

- 5.8 There is no intention to depart from this principle.

  - (b) in the case of health information obtained from the individual, the PSC refers the individual to an information portal or similar system

Health Privacy Code of Practice

which enables the individual to check what health information the PSC holds in relation to the individual.

HPP 8 – Amendment of health information

- (a) in the case of health information obtained from a source other than the individual, the PSC refers the individual to its source, which may include the individual’s employer agency (or, in the case of contingent labour, the NSW public sector agency engaging the individual), or
  - (b) in the case of health information obtained from the individual, the PSC refers the individual to an information portal or similar system which enables the individual to amend the health information that the PSC holds in relation to the individual.

HPP 9 – Accuracy

- 5.12 There is no intention to depart from this principle.

HPP 10 – Limits on use of health information

- 5.13 There is no intention to depart from this principle.

HPP 11 – Limits on disclosure of health information

- 5.14 There is no intention to depart from this principle.
